There were no political callers at Rosemount to-day. The day was the coldest of the season. Fires were built in furnaces at Judge Parker's home and in the lodge, but the sudden drop of the temperature did not deter Judge Parker from taking his daily plunge in the river. An attendant, wrapped in an overcoat, shivered on the dock while Judge Parker took a fro-minute swim, which he pronounced invigorating.

DISCUSSES VARIOUS ISSUES

Says Republicans Have Been Guardian of the Financial Credit of Country.

(By Associated Press.)

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., September 21.-

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., September 21.—
The letter of United States Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, accepting the Republican nomination for the vice-presidency, which was made public to-day, is in part as follows:

The principles which are so frankly and felicitously expressed in the platform adopted by the Republican National Convention meet with my heartlest approval. In the main they have been subjected to the test of actual experience, and have been found to be well suited to our industrial and national needs. They have brought us to a light state of material development, and have made the nation's name respected among the powers of the earth.

The convention did well in its hearty commendation of the administration of President Roosevelt. This is sharply challenged by the opposition. We accept the issue with confidence. The President assumed the responsibilities of chief executive with a pledge to carry out the policy of his beloved and lamented predecessor. He kepa the Cabinet of President McKinley, composed of statesmen of cominent ability, in whom the country placed entire confidence. He carried forward the uncompleted work faithfully and successfully. The pledge has been kept scrupulously; the promise has been fulfilled. Peace and good order have been maintained. without an ally and without an enemy."

Protection and Free Trade.

The convention wisely declared in favor of "protection which guards and develops our industries," and that "the ineasure of protection should always at least equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad."

The Democratic convention, which lately assembled at St. Louis, denounced "protection as a robbery of the many to enrich the few." and favored a "revision and gradual reduction of the tarift."

The issue is thus distinctly made. It is, by no means, a new one, for while the Republican party has been consistent in its opposition.

A revision of duties should be made only when conditions have so changed that the piblic literest, depands their alteration, and they should lie, so revised as to preserve and ilot destrey the protective principic,

A revision and reduction by those who regard the tariff as a robbery must awaken scribus apprehension among all whose capital is employed or who are engaged at labor in the various enterprises throughout the country, which depend in large measure upon the maintenance of the protective system. A revision of the tariff along revenue lines means the increased importation of the products of foreign manufacture which competition with our domestic production. It means a loss to the American wage earners and to American capital. This is, therefore, not a theoretical question which is presented to them, but is one of immediate and practical moment. It can be settled by them, and by them only.

Only.

The development of the country during the last forty-four years is a complete vindcation of the virtue-fid efficies of a contract of the contract of th

The Money Question.

The Money Question.

The Money Question.

The convention very properly declared it to be the duty of the Republican party to uphold the gold standard. There is no more important duty thun to maintain the stability and the character of the money of the people. Their manifold exchanges should be effected in a currency as free from blemish as, the autional integrity. The Republican party has been essentially the guardian of the financial credit of the country and the steadfast supporter of a sound currency. It has maintained the national credit and preserved the soundless of our monetary system against persistent and powerful opposition.

The money question has seemed to be sottled at various times, but the contest has been revived by the enomies of sound money whenever they have thought that they might be successful. We should not relax our vigilance in upholding the integrity of our currency so long as a considerable element of our country are at war with it. When Democratic candidates cannot loope to win preferment in a national convention without industriously concealing their monetary views, and when Democratic national and State conventions dare not declare their faith in a national convention without industriously concealing their monetary views, and when Democratic national and State conventions dare not declare their faith. But a standard, but we provided such safe-guirds as will maintain our silver and sandard, but we provided such safe-guirds as will maintain our silver and paper currency at a parity with it. But all of this may be changed at any time by a hostile Congress, or endangered by an unfriendly Secretary of the Treasury. Our past experience warms us that it is only a question of time when those who are always opposed to a sound monetary policy will again seek to overthrow it.

"The Republican convention of dwell well."

Our past experience warns us that it is only a question of time when those who are always opposed to a sound monetary polley will again seek to overthrow it.

"The Republican convention did well mot only to pledge anew our fidelity to the gold standard, but to declare its purpose to uphold 'the integrity and value of our national currency. There should be no equivocation or doubt as to our infexible purpose, not only to maintain the gold standard, but to keep all silver and paper currency at a parity with it.

"The assumption that the gold standard is 'irrevocably established' does violence to the law. It was established by an Act of Congress, but the Congress may alter, amend or repeal; that act at any time. It is no more irrevocably established than are our tariff schedules. The one may be changed as readily as the other.

"Sound money is so vital to our welfare, so important to our industrial development, that we should let its open chemics or negative friends know that we abate nothing of our determination to uphold and defend it.
